THIS Establishment, which has been favorably known to the public for the last fourteen years, was damaged by fire, and the upper part of the building burnt, on the 14th of February, 1832. The Proprietors availed themselves of that necessary suspension of business, to have the whole interior of the building constructed upon a new and better plan. They have now fitted up and re-established the Museum in a new and elegant manner, entirely different from what it was before. The saloons are spacious and lofty, and the accommodations for visitors throughout such as is hoped will meet entire approbation.
